

24 February 2010

The final countdown is on. In a little over 100 hours the JAARS Spring Aviation Orientation begins. Monday, March 1 five young men will be coming to receive their final training before being sent to Africa and Asia. In addition to these five there are four others that will be doing recurrency training or auditing the course. These four are currently working in Brazil and Southeast Asia.

Dennis is in the orientation mode. The translation of this is that he is fully consumed with preparation for orientation. He traveled some in February going to Kansas and Texas for additional training.

One family that I have been working with recently wrote that the dad couldn't sign a needed document because he was in the village doing a Luke video for a language group.

We want to thank you for making training possible for these nine young aviators and for providing consultant help for this family and others on the front lines of Bible translation. Your faithfulness through your prayers and finances make it possible to reach those waiting to hear. We are so thankful you are on the team.

Seeking to glorify our Father,

Patti, for us both
